

Investigating POC fluxes on an eroding upland blanket bog, Cairngorms National Park, Scotland

Gillian Donaldson-Selby<sup>1,2</sup>, Thomas Parker<sup>1</sup>, Mhairi Coyle<sup>1</sup>, Ailsa Johnson-Marshall<sup>1</sup>, Linda Toca<sup>1</sup>, Catherine Smart<sup>1</sup>, James Cash<sup>1</sup>, Rebekka Artz<sup>1</sup>

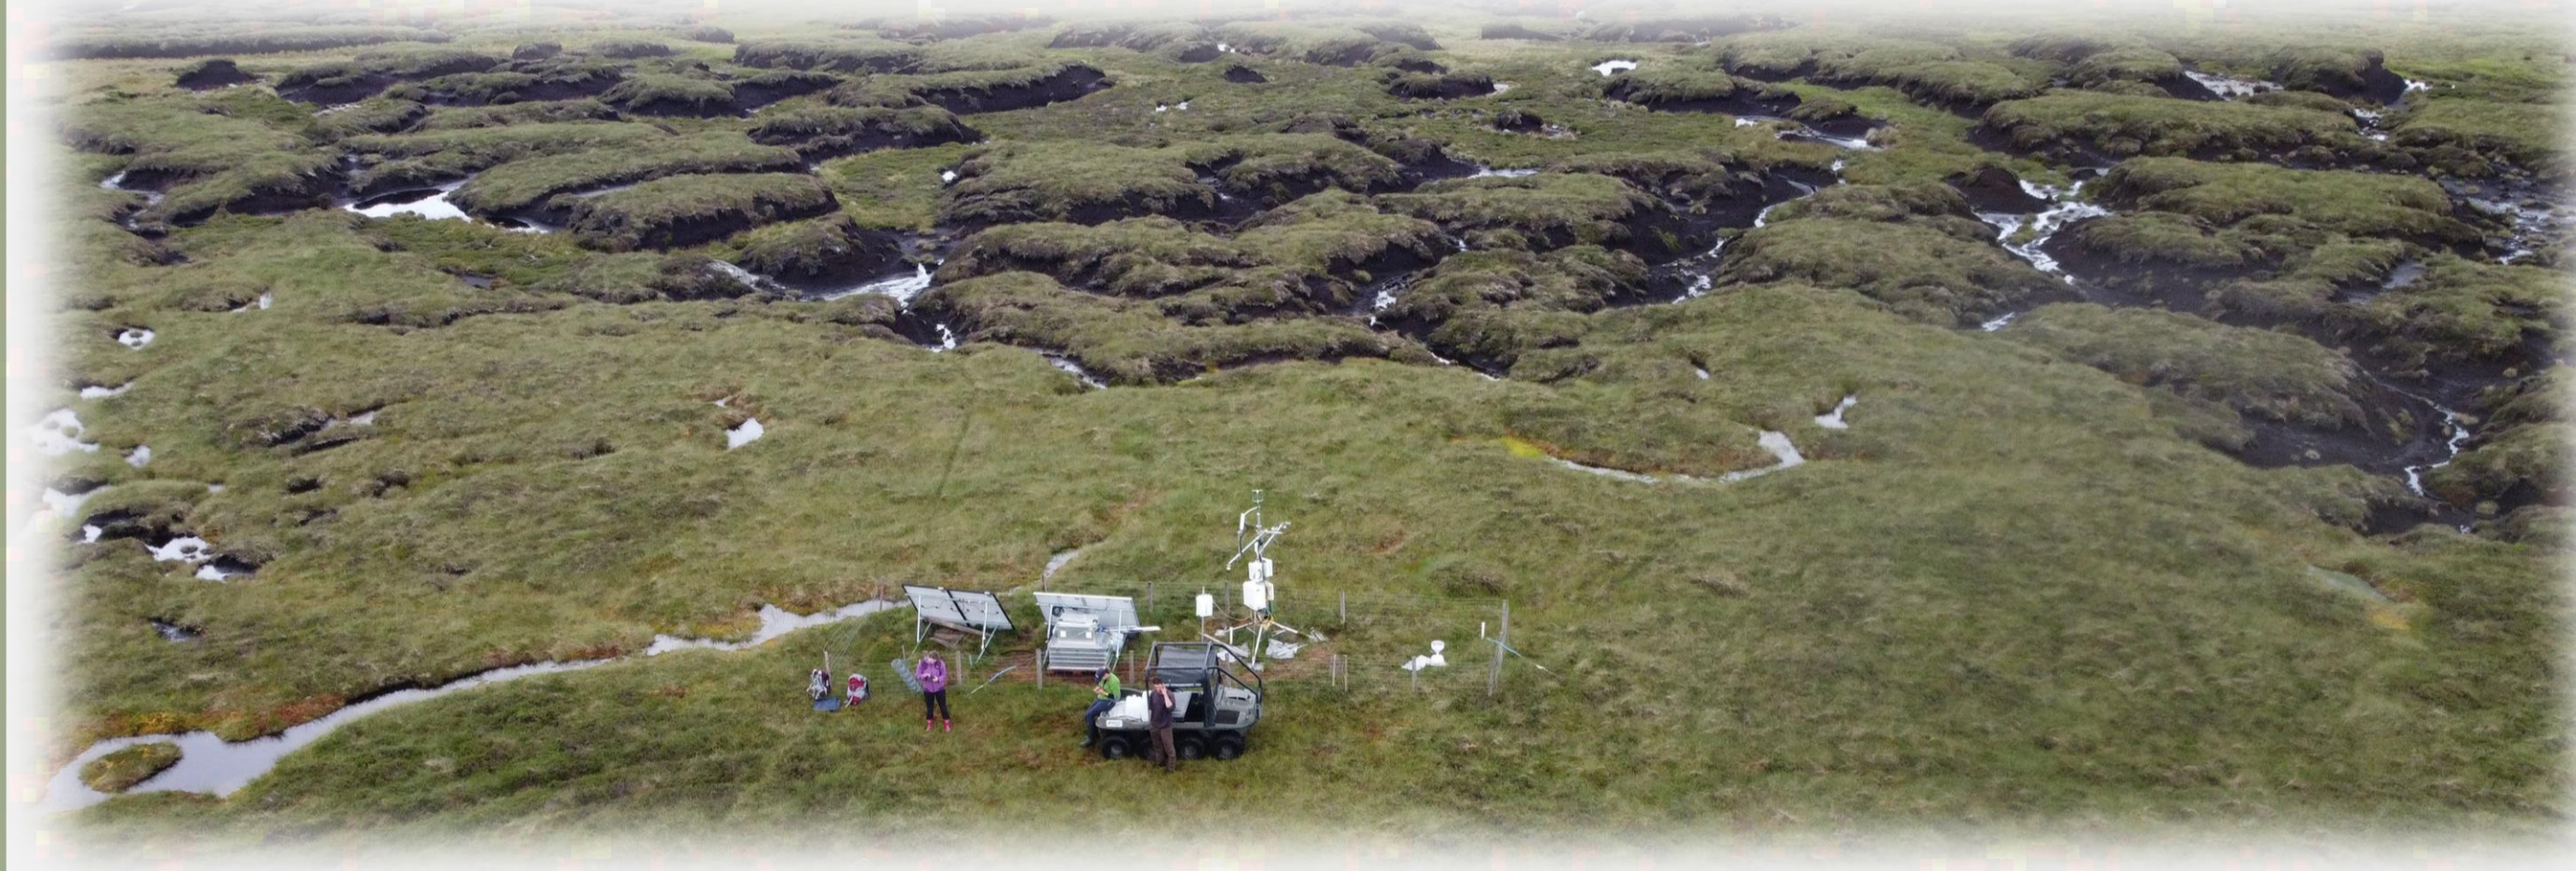

<sup>1</sup>The James Hutton Institute, Aberdeen
Email: Gillian.Donaldson-Selby@hutton.ac.uk

<sup>2</sup>University of the West of England, Bristol

Introduction (aka The Problem, and what we don't know)

- Estimates of peatland POC losses in upland streams vary considerably
- These losses need improved quantification

Objective (aka what we hope to figure out)

- Measure erosion rates and POC fluxes

Methods (aka how we plan on doing that)

- We plan to deploy:
Erosion pins

Sediment traps

LiDAR

